Generations later, when the Don Carlos series was introduced, the family called it "the Pride of the Fuente Family" because of its impeccable craftsmanship and almost magical blend of vintage tobacco.

"They're magnificent tasting," says Gordon. "They pair perfectly with a glass of scotch or bourbon, or even a mug of coffee. The taste is cocoa and caramel blended with the aroma of leather and cedar. Absolutely magnificent smoke."

Gordon hopes that his customers will save up to try a few of these vintage beauties, because Don Carlos aren't the type of cigars you find every day. "They're special," he says. "From tip to tab you can practically taste the dedication that went into it."
