on vacation in London or uncover someone's hidden assets, we will take the time to understand your case and build a strategy together.

Private Investigator UK

We provide London based private detective and investigation services and surveillance - counter-surveillance services for any sector in the Business.

The work is varied and could involve surveillance, fraud investigation, missing person's enquiries, investigating insurance claims, commercial piracy, benefit fraud, data forensics, due diligence, skip tracing and process serving. Investigators ask questions, analyse information and carry out background research. They also use computers to process detailed reports. Many UK Private Investigators are self-employed or work freelance, so need to maintain their own accounts. Despite a glamorous image, the work of a private investigator can be unexciting and financially unrewarding but that of course depends on the Investigator.

What Can UK Private Investigators Legally Do To Trace You?

Private Investigator

Part of a UK Private Investigators job often involves tracking an individual or group of individual's whereabouts through covert operations. They may monitor their comings and goings, keep watch on their house or place of work, and even record phone conversations and check mail. Furthermore, UK Private Investigators could use sophisticated technology or subversive means to try and locate an individual whose whereabouts are unknown or who have gone off-grid.

What many people do not know about Private Investigators , however, is that they have legal obligations, and are prohibited from using certain methods to track individuals. The below information provides insight into this subject.

What Tracking Can Private Investigators Use In The UK?

As mentioned above, Private Investigators and detectives can utilise a range of different methods to track an individual's whereabouts. Some of these methods are listed below:

- GPS (Global Positioning System, an accurate worldwide navigational and surveying facility based on the reception of signals from an array of orbiting satellites.) Tracking: This involves a GPS (Global Positioning System, an accurate worldwide navigational and surveying facility based on the reception of signals from an array of orbiting satellites.) device being tagged to a vehicle or person which then sends data back to a GPS (Global Positioning System, an accurate worldwide navigational and surveying facility based on the reception of signals from an array of orbiting satellites.) server about their movements and physical location.

- Word of mouth: This is the most basic and often effective method; simply speaking to relatives, friends and co-workers. People often divulge information unwittingly to a skilled private investigator. This can be a fantastic help in tracking someone down and/or monitoring their behaviour.

- Private databases: London P.I and detectives have access to city of the art databases that provide up to date information about people's whereabouts - tangible information that they can use to track someone down. This type of service is not readily available to the public as it is either too costly, or under certain restrictions to its access.

Skills and techniques such as the above are tricks of the trade and are developed during an investigator's career. A private detective will use whatever legal means necessary to track an individual's whereabouts and they usually have many tools at their disposal to achieve their ends, leading to a high success rate.

What Legal Acts and Bills Govern Private Investigation?

The UK government has passed numerous acts and bills that regulate private investigation. Several of these acts curtail the powers of investigators and prohibit them from using certain tracking methods. The most notable of these in recent history are the Regulation in Investigatory Powers Act 2000, and the more recent Investigatory Powers Act 2016 nicknamed the Snoopers' Charter.

Regulation in Investigatory Powers Act 2000

This act passed in parliament in July 2000 aims to regulate the powers of public bodies to carry out surveillance and communications interception. The bill detailed various powers that public agencies and organisations could use in cases of national security such as wire taps, reading the post and covert human intelligence.

Investigatory Powers Act 2016

This act passed in 2016 gave new powers to investigation agencies such as allowing them access to internet records and ISP documentation. Furthermore, this act actually created a criminal offence for illegally accessing internet data. Furthermore, this act requires CSP (communication service providers) to cooperate with investigations and provide data if requested.

Do Private Investigators in The UK Need A License?

As you can see, investigators must follow procedures and their actions are regulated by the government. Investigators must also acquire a licence if they wish to operate legally and track an individual's whereabouts. The government operated SIA <https://www.sia.homeoffice.gov.uk> Security Industry Authority is responsible for the distribution of these licenses and an investigator must pass stringent tests in order to obtain one.

Investigators are not above the law and they must have a licence and follow regulations when tracking an individual's whereabouts.

How much does it cost to hire a London Private Investigator? | How much does a UK Private Detective earn? | Do I need a Licence to be a private investigator in the UK? |

If you are looking for London Investigative Services, one of the burning questions is "How much are private investigator fees?" The answer is not so simple.

In general, UK Private Investigators typically charge fees at an hourly rate. While some firms may offer flat-fee packages for a background check or surveillance matter, for the most part every case is different, and it's difficult to put a standard flat fee on anything.

Like any other line of business, the hourly rate differs, based on various factors. Below, we have outlined below some important factors that determine private investigator fees.

?Complexity

Just like any professional service firms, the rates of different investigative firms will vary depending on the complexity of the matter.

A private investigator retained for a complex legal matter with hundreds of thousands of dollars at stake will cost you more than finding an address for a long-lost friend.

?Objective

Are you trying to find out if an individual has a criminal record, or is there something in a person's past that could potentially discredit that person?

Logically speaking, if you are seeking any piece of information to discredit someone, you may have to dig deep. Needless to say, the deeper you want to go, the more expensive it will get.

?Location

Rates vary depending on specific area of expertise and the jurisdiction in which the case is being worked.

For example, a surveillance investigator in "Anywhere, U.K." may charge half the rate of a metro London-based surveillance investigator who is conducting exactly the same investigation but charging upwards of £150 per hour for each investigator.

?Skill

Investigators who are trained to conduct a complex asset investigation will demand higher fees than investigators those who conduct surveillance.

The most prominent London investigative firms charge more than £500 per hour.

?Closing

Rates for London UK Private Investigators vary widely, from less than £75 per hour to more than £500 per hour.

The old adage "You get what you pay for" applies to the investigative business, just as it does to almost anything else.

Ultimately, London UK Private Investigators are hired to find information to help you make more informed decisions and need to be comfortable with the information you are getting and the people with whom you are dealing, regardless of what fees they are charging you.

Why hire our Proactive private detectives?

Our private investigators aren't just for catching out cheating partners or catching out fraudsters. As a private investigator we can assist in many different ways, whether at home or in the workplace.

A client has met someone online - but are they who they say they are? You can carry out background checks and put their mind at rest before they take the relationship any further.

A client suspects their partner is cheating but can't prove it.

A private investigator will uncover the truth and put their mind at rest.

A person has lent someone money - and they've disappeared. A private investigator can help track them down, and serve legal notices if required.

Someone needs expert surveillance to ensure they know the movements of a certain person. Perhaps they suspect their teenage children are involved with drugs or lying about who they are meeting - the assistance of a specially trained private investigator can help keep them safe.

A client needs to trace a long lost relative or friend - A private investigator has the skills to track someone down.

A company's employee is off work with a long term illness but doubts they really are genuinely ill.

They suspect their office or Board Room has been bugged.

A solicitor needs a process server to personally serve some legal documents on behalf of one of their clients or to assist in gathering evidence in a defence case.

A GPS (Global Positioning System, an accurate worldwide navigational and surveying facility based on the reception of signals from an array of orbiting satellites.) tracker could be needed to track a vehicle in real time, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, anywhere in the world.

A client needs to know if a certain person is a company director and if so with how many different companies. Is this person disqualified from being a company director?

There are many other situations where a professional qualified private investigator can assist at home or work in a variety of matters - could it be you?

How Much a private investigator Costs: Common Cases + What to Pay

Private Investigator Cost

Mostly people often have a variety of questions about the services private investigators provide. In many instances, those questions relate to an investigator's role in gathering evidence or uncovering hidden information. However, there is one question that probably gets asked more than any other: how much does a private investigator cost? After all, investigations take time and resources, and those things cost money. If you need an investigation and are wondering about the cost for a private investigator, this article is for you.

How Much Are Private Investigators?

Like most services, the cost of hiring UK Private Investigators is determined by a variety of factors. Below, we examine some of the many variables that can determine what private investigators cost. Keep in mind that there may be any number of other factors involved in determining the actual price for private investigation services in your area. Always do your due diligence to ensure that you understand the full costs involved in any private investigation before you commit to hiring an investigator.

private investigator are specialized professionals trained and licensed to conduct surveillance, collect evidence, and use specialized databases to look into matters such as cheating, child custody cases, missing people, and pre-employment checks. In short, if you need to get to the bottom of something, a private investigator can help you.

Factors Involved in Private Investigator Cost: Retainers, Hourly Fees, and Flat-rate Costs

This post examines 4 different types of payment structures private investigator use, and how much it costs to hire a private investigator to investigate 6 popular case types

How Much Does a Private Investigator Cost?

Across all cases, the cost of hiring a private investigator in the UK ranges from negotiable per hour. Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services, as the largest national network of licensed private investigator, charges between negotiable.

Retainers for most agencies range from negotiable depending on the type of case. Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services' average case cost works out as 7 hours at £79/hour, or £553.00 with no retainer (we don't charge one). Surveillance cases will run higher, while research cases will run lower, depending on the circumstances.

How much a private investigator costs depends on the work you want done and the location in which the case will be based. Whether you want to hire a private detective to find records or property, follow someone, investigate infidelity, or find a lost relative, you'll need to know how investigators charge, and what the likely cost will be for your case.

Common Cases and Their Costs

We've handled lots of cases here at Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services. To help you understand how much you can expect to pay for a private investigator's services in handling common cases, we've compiled some typical case costs based on our own hourly rate of £79-£99 (we charge hourly, with a small setup fee - we do not charge a retainer). We've also included some general notes on different cases, and a rough guide to prices from other agencies to help you compare our own methods to the rest of the industry.

Locating Someone

Typical case length: 4-8 hours

Typical cost: £316 - £632

Finding someone can include process serving, a skip trace for a court matter, locating a runaway child, or just finding an old friend.

A locate case can vary greatly in cost. Often 4-8 hours or more of work is not atypical for this sort of case. Obviously, this will fluctuate depending on how much information you have on the person you're searching for, and other factors affecting the difficulty of the case.

Most London Investigators will use the hourly rate payment structure to locate someone, and may charge you for expenses. (like

Surveillance, Infidelity, and Following People

Typical case length: 4-18 hours

Typical cost: £316 - £1242

Each case is different. Surveillance cases can be unpredictable, but generally speaking the more information about the person of interest's (POI's) habits and personal life that the investigator has, the faster they can investigate.

Most agencies will charge a retainer for cases like this that tend to range anywhere from £1,000 - £5,000, with an hourly rate charged against that retainer. At Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services , we simply charge an hourly rate (that we discount for longer cases). We have a whole post that breaks down what you can expect to be charged to have someone followed.

Locating Birth Parents or Adopted Children

Typical case length: 2-10 hours

Typical cost: £158 - £790

The cost of a case of this nature depends on a couple of key factors, namely how long it has been since last contact, and the availability of key records (like birth certificates etc). If the case is recent, a quick digital investigation can locate someone in a matter of an hour or so. If the person you're looking for was born some time ago and you have little information, the case can run a little longer.

Because these cases can be lengthy and often difficult, most agencies will charge a retainer usually ranging from

£5,000-£10,000, and then charge hourly against this sum.

Again, at Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services we will simply charge our hourly rate, which is discounted for longer cases. To help get your case started, you can also take a look at our online investigative guide.

In-depth Background Checks and Research

Typical case length: 4-8 hours

Typical cost: £316 - £632

The cost of a proper, in-depth background check from a private investigator depends primarily on what you're looking for, and what you have to go on. If you're looking for things like phone records, court records, or other detailed information, these will affect the final price of the case. The more detail you're looking for, and the less information you have to get started, the more your case is likely to cost.

You may be wondering why this price is higher than the online search services you might have found on the web. A background check by a private investigator costs more because, rather than quickly combing over public records and outdated databases, you'll have an experienced human with information that a normal civilian can't access working on your case. There are better ways actually to perform a free background check, but if the background check is important to you, then you should use a private investigator .

Getting Phone Records or Tracing Cell Phones

Typical case length: -

Typical cost: -

Cell phone records used to be available ( up until 2006 for a nominal sum by licensed investigators - but the law changed, and now different methods are required.

These days, investigators can use tools, guesswork, and human intelligence to determine what carrier a phone number is on and who it is registered to. They can also use other surveillance and investigation methods to investigate who someone might be contacting (this is the preferred method).

It's actually illegal for a private investigator to track someone's phone without the permission of the owner of the phone. If you do need to track someone's phone, we do have an article that covers surveillance instead. Generally speaking, surveillance isn't on shakey legal ground like cell phone tracking is, and pictures make much better evidence which if taken correctly can be used in court.

How to Hire a private investigator

Ready to hire a private investigator ? Here's a few things you should know, whether you hire a private investigator through Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services or not.

Check Their Reviews or Get a Recommendation. There are unscrupulous investigators out there - and even fake ones! (You can check Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services 's reviews on Trustpilot.)

Check their license. Some research cases do not require a licensed investigator - but if the case is on location or requires experience and specialized database access, then you should make sure they are licensed in the city they will be operating in throughout the case. Here's a handy guide on licensing information for each city.

Ask about confidentiality and security. Make sure that you are comfortable with their procedures, including how they plan to communicate with you throughout the case, how they intend to send you their final report, and what their skills are with undercover work if they are going to be in sensitive, covert situations.

Ask about their experience and training. private investigator that operate illegally or unethically can get you in trouble or harm your case. Ask them about using GPS (Global Positioning System, an accurate worldwide navigational and surveying facility based on the reception of signals from an array of orbiting satellites.) trackers, hacking into cell phones, and techniques. These three techniques are all legally restricted and prohibited in most circumstances.

Ask about insurance. Many cities have insurance requirements for licensed investigators. Insurance isn't necessary for every case, but if it is you should ask about it and make sure that they have the required coverage.

Discuss your expectations. A good private investigator will discuss your expectations before money changes hands. Sometimes it is not possible to achieve all your goals, and you should be aware of what's possible before the case actually begins.

Typical private investigator Charges and Fees

private investigator will typically charge for their work using a combination of one of these 4 common pricing structures. It's not uncommon to have a retainer combined with an hourly rate, or to have expenses included in an hourly rate - be sure to confirm this with your investigator before you begin your case.

Note: Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services charges from £69-£79 an hour for our private investigator' services, excluding expenses, with no retainer. This fee includes dedicated case support to help you get what you need and extensively vetted investigators.

Hourly Rates

Generally, hourly rates for private investigator range between £40-£200 nationwide. Hourly rates change depending on your location, the investigator or agency you hire, the difficulty of the case, whether you'll have more than one investigator on the case, and even the time of year.

Most investigators and agencies (including Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services ) will adjust their hourly rate based on factors like overall hours purchased, the price of gas, and expected risks to the investigator's safety. Most agencies (like Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services ) reduce their price per hour if you hire them for a large number of hours. This is important, since investigations involving tactics like surveillance can take a significant length of time.

Note: Most hourly rates normally don't include any extra fees that an investigator might incur but Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services will cover normal expenses a private investigator may charge for (outlined later in this post).

Flat Fees and Rates

For services that are straightforward to complete, a private investigator or agency may charge a flat fee. Flat fees are simply a fixed price for the service's completion. In the private investigation industry, a flat rate pricing structure should also cover any other expense to complete your case. The sorts of cases that often attract a flat fee include:

Background Checks

GPS (Global Positioning System, an accurate worldwide navigational and surveying facility based on the reception of signals from an array of orbiting satellites.) Monitoring

License Plate Searches

Confirming a Cell Phone Number

Employment Checks

Retainers

Retainers can vary from £1,000 to over £5,000 per case, depending on the investigator's or agency's policy, and the work you need completed.

Some investigators will charge against your retainer and refund anything that they don't use, while others will keep the full amount, whether or not they use all of it. If the services that the private investigator agreed to provide for you exceed the cost of your retainer, or the investigation incurs expenses exceeding the value of the retainer, you'll most likely be charged for them.

At Trustworthy, Affordable, Reliable Private Detective And Investigation Services , we do not charge a retainer - just a one-time £50 processing fee to get your case started, and then charge you at an hourly rate after that.

Expenses

If your investigator is charging either a retainer, an hourly rate, or a mix of the two, you will most likely also have to cover any expenses your investigator incurs throughout their investigation. Some of the common expenses include:

Drive Time/Mileage - How long and how many miles it takes for an Investigator to follow someone. (£0.20-£0.75/mile)

Tolls - Any tolls that your Investigator has to pay during the investigation.

Air Fare - If your investigator has to fly to your job site, you should expect to foot the bill for the plane tickets.

Hotel Fees - If your job requires an investigator to spend the evening in a hotel, you should expect to cover their room.

Court Appearances - If your Investigator has to testify, they usually will charge for their time in court, either with a flat fee or hourly rate.

Administrative Costs - Some investigators will charge for things like mailing evidence, faxing, administrative staff, etc. Typically, this ranges from £50-£150.

Database Fees - if your investigator uses private databases in the course of their search, they may also charge you for any fees they had to pay for the use of the database.

It's extremely important that you get an itemized invoice at the end of your investigation to make sure that you can account for all of the expenses your investigator may have charged.

Hopefully this guide has given you a good idea of what your case is likely to cost. If you're still not sure, that's OK - the cost of each case tends to be determined on a well, case-by-case basis. Individual circumstances, information given, and other specifics have huge impact on the price of any investigation. The best thing to do is to talk to a professional and see what they say. You can get a free case estimate right here, anytime.
